Empathy Map Canvas:

User Persona

The primary user of the Metro Ticket Generating System is a metro passenger who regularly uses metro services for daily commuting. These users include students, employees, and other commuters who require a fast, convenient, and reliable ticket booking process. They expect a system that minimizes waiting time, provides accurate fare information, and allows them to book tickets easily without visiting a ticket counter.

Think & Feel

Metro passengers value convenience, speed, and reliability while booking tickets. They expect the booking process to be simple and user-friendly so that they can complete it within a few minutes. They also want accurate fare calculations and secure storage of their booking details. Their primary concern is reaching their destination on time without experiencing unnecessary delays during ticket purchasing.

See

Passengers often observe long queues at metro ticket counters, especially during peak hours. They notice that manual ticket booking consumes time and increases congestion at stations. At the same time, they are familiar with digital services in other sectors and expect a similar online booking experience for metro travel. They prefer a modern system that provides quick access to ticket booking and booking history.

Hear

Passengers frequently hear suggestions from friends, family members, and fellow commuters about using digital platforms for faster services. They also receive announcements encouraging passengers to use online services whenever available. These interactions create an expectation that metro ticket booking should also be automated, efficient, and easily accessible.

Say & Do

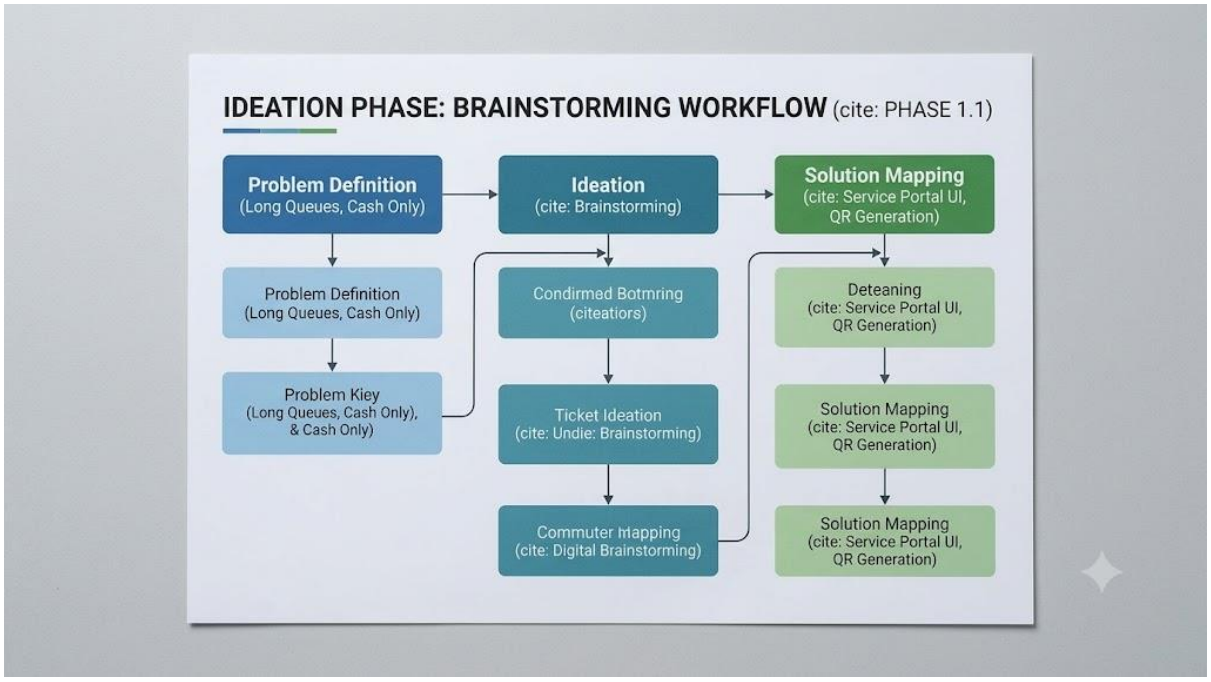

Passengers express the need for a faster and more convenient ticket booking process. They prefer using online services rather than standing in long queues. During the booking process, they select their source and destination stations, verify the fare, confirm the booking, and expect immediate ticket generation. They also appreciate having access to their previous booking records whenever required.

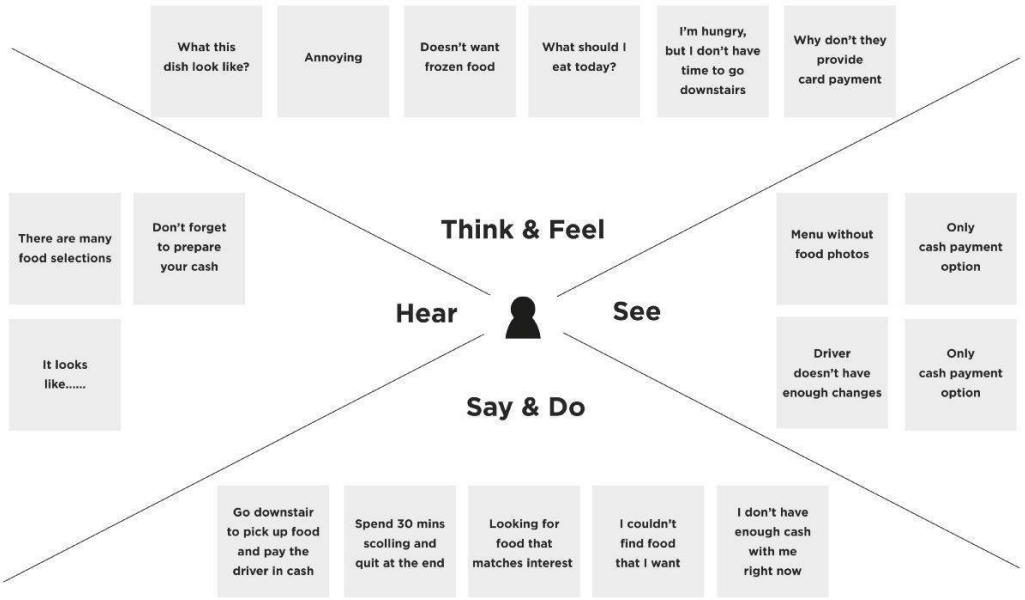

Pain

The biggest challenge faced by passengers is the time spent waiting in queues for purchasing tickets. Manual ticket management may result in delays, booking errors, and difficulty in maintaining travel records. During busy hours, overcrowding at ticket counters further increases inconvenience and negatively affects the overall travel experience.

Gain

The proposed Metro Ticket Generating System provides a simple and efficient solution by automating the complete ticket booking process through ServiceNow. Passengers can book tickets quickly, receive accurate fare calculations, and maintain their booking history in a centralized system. The automated workflow reduces manual effort, minimizes waiting time, improves data accuracy, and enhances the overall passenger experience while making metro travel more convenient.
